BIG THROG AT JAMESTOWN

FALL RACING AT VIRGINIA'S PRETTY TRACK IS AUSPICIOUSLY INAUGURATED.

Guy Fisher Wins the Norfolk Handicap and Corinth. One of His Stablemates, Accounts for Another of the Purses—Mishaps in Steeplechase.

Norfolk, Va., November 1.—Bob Levy, the Texan who is promoting the races being given here under the auspices of the Jamestown Jockey Club, must certainly have felt encouraged over the crowd that turned out at the Norfolk course this afternoon to witness the opening day's sport of the meeting. Fully 5,000 persons were present and it was an enthusiastic crowd, too, much interest being taken by the local people in the sport.

The feature race, the Norfolk Handicap, at seven furlongs, to which the club added $1,000, brought out a smart field of sprinters and furnished a splendid contest, the winner turning up in Guy Fisher, which came from behind in the stretch to beat High Private a length. There were seven starters and A. Lang had the mount on the winner. Besom showed a flash of speed for three furlongs, but retired on the backstretch in favor of High Private, and at the finish was beaten off. There was strong support for the winner and he went to the post favorite. Practical, the Belmont entry, was never prominent. Corinth, a stable companion to Guy Fisher, proved an easy winner of the fifth race. She led from start to finish and had something in reserve at the end. Lang also rode Corinth and the stable profited handsomely by her victory. It is said that a stiff commission found its way into the handbooks around the country on Corinth and also on Guy Fisher.

Favorites won three of the races, the successful choices being Leah, Guy Fisher and Takahira. Leah's victory over Cuttyhunk was a surprise except to the shrewd division that backed the winner. The steeplechase resulted in a chapter of mishaps. Lizzie Flat, the winner, being the only one that finished the course without mishap. West Over, which finished second, jumped the wing at the sixth fence, while Dr. Heard, after leading Lizzie Flat over the sixth jump, sprang suddenly and stopped. This jump is located at the gate which leads from the infield and is located directly opposite the paddock. Dr. Heard evidently thought that the race was over and refused to go further. He was finally shipped away and managed to finish the course in time to take third money.

The management announced that the horses would not be called to the post for the first race on Wednesday and Thursday until 2:45, but that during the remainder of the meeting the first race would be started at 2:15.

Steward Frank J. Bryan, in response to a telegram from assistant secretary of the Jockey Club, Algonon Bunkerfield, prevented jockey Fain from riding this afternoon. The latter, who is under contract to R. F. Carman, ran away from the latter last summer, but at Baltimore Mr. Carman agreed to release the lad provided he signed to ride for E. F. Condran. Fain agreed to do so, but up to date no papers have been signed, hence Mr. Carman's action in the matter.

Jockey Guy Burns is expected here from Latonia to ride for Albert Simons. Burns' contract with J. W. Schorr expired November 1.

Tom Lynn has returned from Vancouver with Comby and a Bearcatcher colt out of Coming Event. He has turned out Balaade.

W. Short has arrived from Spokane with Thomas Salmon and Round and Round. He won the Spokane derby with Thomas Salmon. Good Ship has been turned out for the winter and he has taken up quarters in an old crib.

W. M. Cain will add Boloman, Bellini, Queen Mamie and a couple of yearlings to his string, which will make 22 in all. He won the Spokane derby with Thomas Salmon. Good Ship has been turned out for the winter and he has taken up quarters in an old crib.

Richard Dwyer and Jake Holtman will alternate as starters as usual at Oakland this season and it is announced that Mr. Dwyer will open the meeting. He will preside at the barrier during the first two weeks.

Columbus Jones, who has not been here since 1900, was a recent arrival. He booked at Denver and other points.

Joe Rose, who recently returned from Europe with Abe Kemper, will come west early in November.

NICK STONER RESCUED FROM A CAB.

Baltimore, Md., November 1.—Nick Stoner, a recent winner at Pimlico, pulled a lansom cab in Brooklyn all last winter. Many a cold night he shivered in front of the Atlantic avenue station of the Long Island Railroad, waiting for a fare. Nick was contented to mend duty between shafts more than a year ago when he bowed a tendon.

Frank Purcell discovered and recognized him at the beginning of the current year and bought him from his lansom owner. But he did not get Nick for a song. Nick is a thoroughbred, and a thoroughbred pulls a cab about five times as well as a cold-blooded horse. The intelligent caddy drove a sharp bargain with Purcell.

It took a lot of work to get Nick to the races, but Mr. Purcell was patient and the stout little chestnut has run two good races. He was a trifle sore after the finish of his recent winning, but he is likely to win again at Jamestown.

A son of Clifford and Barbina, this stout chestnut, which has demonstrated anew the usefulness of the thoroughbred, was a product of Harricana Farm, by get Nick Stoner to the races here at Pimlico. Mr. Purcell trained him to a sulky.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES.

- A. L. T., Cincinnati, O. Certainly.
J. T. S., Chicago. The bet on Descomnets lost.
M. C., Chicago. Pirate Diana was not out to show.

- H. B., Kenosha, Wis. The wager on Descomnets lost.

- S. W. and others, Dayton, O. Plan Ryan ran third and pays on show bet only at $5.20 to $1.

- J. G. E., Janesville, Wis. Deducting the amount bet and the loss on Hans, you should have been paid $16.

- Al H., Kansas City, Mo. The bets were separate transactions and the winnings of the place bet went to the Belmont entry.

- Chas. B., Detroit, Mich. There was abundance of place and show betting on John Reardon, as there always is on favorites in pari-mutuel betting.

- V. G., Kansas City, Mo. The loss on Van Den having occurred prior to the sixth race, there was nothing left to go on Heatherbrook in that race.

- E. G., Allegheny, Pa. The decision is one that has always been made in this newspaper ever since mutual betting came into use on the Kentucky tracks.

- W. H. B., St. Louis, Mo. Had High Range finished first, second or third, bets on him would have been payable accordingly. He ran unplaced and his handbook backers lost.

- Edward T., Chicago. An entry is in the name of the owner, and not of a horse. There was no such thing as a "High Private entry," but having accepted the bet the bookmaker should pay what it won, a straight bet on Round the World.

- 11 Engine Co., Cincinnati, O. Certainly not.
The big show betting on John Reardon and Prince Gal went to swell the dividends on the three placed horses and made the pay much greater than it would have been if the two favorites had finished first and second.

NOTES OF THE TURF.

The horses of J. R. Wainwright will leave Churchill Downs for Juarez in a few days.Fitz Herbert impresses the Kentuckians as being in excellent physical condition, although a bit high in flesh.Jockey Gaskin, a development of the Pimlico meeting, is a colored boy who is under contract to William Garth.T. C. McDowell has accepted H. D. Brown's invitation to serve as representative of the western horsemen on the board of stewards at Moncreif Park, Jacksonville, the coming winter.Trainer Thomas H. McCreery has left New York for California and intends to spend two years in the west in the hope of recovering his health, which has been poor of late. Mr. McCreery will remain at Oakland during the winter and make an extensive camping expedition into the Sierra Navadas next summer.The management of the Juarez track will institute an innovation in the coming season by locating the stewards' stand on the opposite side of the track and separate from the judges' stand. It is considered by many that the stand on the inner side, as is customary on trotting tracks, affords the occupant a better opportunity to discern crowding and jostling in a race, and therefore more clearly an opportunity to determine fouls.

DEATH OF LONDON SPORTSMAN'S FOUNDER.

Interesting Features in the Life Career of the Owner of the Famous Horse Rosebery.James Smith, founder of the Sportsman and long a prominent figure on the English turf, died quite recently at the advanced age of eighty-six years.
His career was one of the achievements of many and interesting. London Sportsman gives the following entertaining story of his life:

Mr. James Smith, a prominent figure in the racing world during the sixties, seventies and eighties, was born at Manchester, in his early days he was engaged in the printing trade, at one time being connected with Bradshaw's Railway Guide, while later he was manager of a large printing establishment in Manchester. A man of fine presence, he was a typical Englishman—refined and intelligent. In fact, of the John Bull type, as portrayed in Punch by the deft pencils of Tenniel and Linley Sambourne. Sport of all kinds, particularly horse racing, found in the deceased a ready devotee and the early years of his life became devoted to the study of the horse. He was connected with Mr.
Moseley, Jr., of Wolverhampton, for whom he betted.
The brothers Henry and Thomas Wadlow at that period were already installed at Shifnal, in Salop, from which famous training establishment, were destined to issue forth in the years to come many horses whose deeds on the turf made for them a great reputation as a training ground. Discouraging on this topic in Post and Paddock, The Druid said: "The best country tan gallop we know of is Wadlow's at Stanton, which is about a mile and a quarter from the town, and is situated in the foot of Lizard Wood, a favorite meet in the Al-brighton Hunt. No wonder that old Alonzo, our ten-year-old turf nester, was always ready for his spring work." Alonzo was foaled in 1847, and in his long career won numerous races for his owner. He belonged to Mr. Moseley, one of H. Wadlow's partners, who also owned Bourton. To Mr. James Smith was entrusted the working of the commissions in connection with Bourton and Alonzo for the Grand National and Doncaster Spring Handicap of 1854. Both horses were victorious, and by the connection with particular, of Bourton in the big steeplechase a large stake was landed by the party. Mr. Moseley's colors, scarlet, white belt, black cap, were at that time particularly favored by fortune, for, after winning the National, Bourton in the following week, under a ten-pound penalty, carried off the Doncaster Steeplechase, which, with Alonzo's victory, made a nice treble event. It was after these successes that James Smith himself became an owner of race horses, in partnership with Mr. Sydney Smith, also hailing from the Manchester district, but of a more enough, in no way related to his partner. This connection lasted for upwards of twenty-five years, during which time the partnership had possession of some of the best horses that ever trod the turf.

Their first venture was a note then a Jolly named Queen of Spain, a brown daughter of King Tom, out of Ma Mle (an own sister to Empress, from whom came in tall female such good latter-day horses as Queen's Birthday and Nunbottle). Queen of Spain's career was not very brilliant, but she was the broodmare of the opening day of the race, and in 1861 at that time was not of the same importance as later in his history, but the filly was exceptionally good and she won three other races that year. The first great success of the partnership was the winning of the Cesarewitch of 1862, with the three-year-old Hartington, which was foaled in the same season as Queen of Spain. After being bought at Doncaster Hartington was first of all trained by William and George Bates at Middleham, and then by John Dan-son at Ilsey, together with Queen of Spain, Vancouver, etc. As a juvenile Hartington did no good, and in a nursery at Warwick was one of the un-placed division to the queen. In the following season, however, he was sent to Newmarket to train for Prince (then Count) Balfour and General Peel, and the Messrs. Smith transferred their horses to the care of Treen at Beckhampton. Hartington, which was a bay colt by Voltigeur out of Countess of Burlington, was sent backward then pulled out for a race at Epsom, Spring Meeting of 1863, and did not again sport silk until the Cesarewitch, for which he was allotted 5st. 10lb. Ridden by Jimmy Grimshaw, then a fashionable lightweight, he defied a field of thirty-six rivals—the largest number that ever went to the post for this event. James Smith was fond of relating how he had borrowed Dusk—which that year won six races—to try Hartington with, not very long after Dusk had run a very respectable third in the Somersetshire Stakes at Bath to Caracacus, the subsequent Derby winner. The manner in which Hartington settled his schoolmaster convinced the Messrs. Smith that they had in their possession a horse combining the two essential qualities of speed and staying power, for, as James Smith used to say, he never saw so tired a horse as Dusk was at the end of the race. The spin. So long was he in coming round that for a time he feared the gallop had completely settled him. Jimmy Grimshaw used to tell the story of how his elder brother, Harry—then the leading lightweight jockey—advised him during the race to "not knock his mount about as he had no chance." The truth was that by some oversight Hartington had a strange bit, which he would not face for a long time, and perhaps it was only little Grimshaw's previous experience of the horse which enabled him to persevere and to tell his brother that the horse had "not galloped yet." Hartington's former trainer must have been considerably astonished at the colt's easy victory, for so little did he esteem his chance that—as was said—Harry felt before the race that "Tete's National" had declared that Hartington wins the Cesarewitch "I'll eat him." Hartington came very near to repeating the victory a fortnight later under his penalty in the Cambridgehire, for which he landed his in another field of thirty-seven to Lord Chestfield's Bathurst. So the finish between the leading horses that the winner was only about two lengths in advance of Hartington, which would probably have won but for getting very badly away and carrying, moreover, three pounds over the top of his second race, and, owing to the impossibility of securing a jockey who could do the right thing.

Had Hartington been prepared for the Derby, for which he was nominated by his breeder, W. Robinson, he would probably have won the race, and Caracacus and Caracacus—have carried off the Blue Riband.
As matters stood, although inferentially the best of his year, he was an unlucky horse, for, apart from his brilliant Cesarewitch victory, he won nothing, and eventually broke down.

Earlier, in 1862, the partners won the St. Lix Handicap at Northampton Spring, a race at that period of some importance, with the four-year-old, Vancouver, by The Flying Dutchman, out of Dividend, which was the Smiths' horse. It may be related that the Messrs. Smith, who were then at Doncaster in 1859 in order to buy yearlings, marking down for purchase Vancouver and two others. These others were Kettledrum and Dundee, which as three-year-olds finished respectively first and second for the Derby. The third, a wing Kettledrum, was started bidding for him, but the trainer, Oates, with whose stable Sydney Smith was connected, assured him that he held an unlimited commission, so they did not go on. As to Dundee, a good-looking, blood-like, light-colored colt, by Lord's son, he was sold of Marmalade, his dam's only previous foal, Caviere, had not won a race, and as Mr. Merry was bidding for Dundee as if he meant having him, the partners contented themselves with the purchase of Vancouver. The son of The Flying Dutchman, Dividend, was secured for 400 guineas. As a yearling the colt won an extraordinarily high trial with a three-year-old of John Dawson's called Lady Kingston—a speedy winner under big weights—and so greatly did the spin impress people that Lord Stanford afterwards offered James Smith 2,000 guineas for him—at that time a big price for a yearling.
Dawson advised Mr. Smith to keep the colt; for Dundee, which was in his brother's (Mat Dawson) stable, and also been a winner. A solitary success in the two and two together, and a conclusion was reached that the colt was better than Mr. Merry's colt.
As all the world knows, Dundee, after an almost unbeaten juvenile career, broke down in the Derby, and, even so, on three legs, hunted Kettledrum home; but Vancouver was destined never to fulfill the high hopes formed of him in his early days.
He ran only twice at two years of age, it being decided to give him plenty of time to develop his immature frame, but in neither of his races did he disgrace himself, finishing fourth to Big Ben—a speedy colt of Mr. Saxon's—at Bath and running well at Ascot in the New Stakes, won by the same eccentric owner's Brown Duchess, which later credited him with the Oaks. Vancouver made steady progress during his autumn and winter, and in the following spring high hopes were entertained of his winning the City and Suburban, for which he was heavily supported. So well did the colt please his connections that the contingency of his subsequently winning the Derby was deemed the reverse of improbable. That such a double was by no means impossible was proved in later days by Sefton, but Vancouver fell a victim to a bad chill and did not recover the post for either race, and never fully recovered his form afterwards. A solitary success in the St. Lix Handicap at Northampton early in his four-year-old season, caused him to be once more much favored for the City and Suburban. In that race (inclusive of a five-pound penalty) he carried only ninety-nine pounds, but broke down in the race and George Clement, who was riding him, was severely injured. Mr. Naylor's Sawcutters, which won in a canter by three lengths. Rather curiously, Vancouver and Mr. Saville's Ducat, which were joint favorites for the Epsom race, both descended to selling place rank, and in the subsequent autumn Vancouver was sold and his racing career by finishing nearly last in a selling handicap of which Ducat was the winner. Turf history teems with instances of similar failures, however, and Mr. Smith was more than recompensed in the long run when Rosebery came to the turf.

Many years had still to run their course prior to Rosebery's historic and, for some time, unique double in the Cesarewitch and Cambridgehire, and in the interim much happened to which reference must first be made. Shortly after Hartington's victory in the Cesarewitch, the deceased retained an interest in those days meant the winning also a large portion, the Messrs. Smith decided to devote a portion of their winnings to the establishment of a sporting paper, being convinced that public support would not be forthcoming for a journal conducted by energetic and practical men. That the idea was sound and its method of development equally so is a matter of history, for, although at that period the youngest of the London sporting papers, The Sportsman early became the recognized leader, and, as the first daily paper devoted mainly to sporting matters, got left at its competitors' heels. Returning to James Smith's career as an owner, much interesting "copy" might be written concerning the turf in the sixties, but considerations of space make it necessary to come at last to Rosebery, the colt who enabled his owner to score their second success in the Cesarewitch, but, as previously mentioned, was the first horse that ever carried his fourteen-pound penalty to victory in the Cambridgehire. Foaled in 1872 by Speculum, out of Ladylike, by Newminster, Rosebery was bred by W. Green and was purchased by James Smith as a yearling at Doncaster for 200 guineas, his dam and her foal by Knight of the Garter, which preceded him in the sale ring, being bought by the Cobham Company for 550 guineas. As a two-year-old Rosebery was sporting known as the Ladylike colt—was of little account, coming to his form comparatively late in life, and he ran but seldom, sporting silk on only four occasions in his first two seasons. Had he been run off his legs in his early days he would probably never have emerged from obscurity; but one day, as a four-year-old, he did so well in a rough gallop that he was entered in the big autumn handicaps at Newmarket, together with half a dozen other members of George Clement's string. Included in the number were such good horses as Akbar, Prodgal, Bourbaki and Blantyre.
The last named had two years previously won the Liverpool Summer Cup for Mr. Merry, and although subsequently only a moderate sixth for Apology's St. Leger, he was a useful horse and had, at later date, been purchased by the Messrs. Smith's horses in training for 2,300 guineas by "Mr. Masque," much to the annoyance of his trainer, Robert Peck.
So disgusted was the Russley trainer at losing him that he refused to give the paltry horse, who when he was sold for "Mr. Masque" (the assumed name of one of his stable patrons) Akbar had brought off a minor double at Lincoln and Liverpool in the spring, and Prodgal had carried off the Great Northamptonshire Stakes (two miles) carrying 112 pounds. These and the other horses made first-rate trial tackle for Rosebery, which until shortly before the race was unnamed. So well was the son of Speculum befriended that a week or so before the Cesarewitch he was favorite at 100 to 1. At the start, however, owing to the great demand of Fred Swindell's Woodlands and Sir John Astley's Hopton, he was only third favorite, his final quotation being 100 to 14. The handicapper evidently had some inkling as to Rosebery's merit, for he allotted him 138 pounds, three pounds more than the weight given to the astute "Lord Freddy's" Woodlands, deemed by his party to be invincible. For once in a way, however, Mr. Swindell made a mistake in his calculations, for Rosebery with Fred Archer in the saddle, won in canter by four lengths from Woodlands, and Harry Merry Duchess beaten another neck. Woodlands was the mount of Billy Newhouse, then in the zenith of his fame, and started favorite at the short price of 4 to 1 in a field of twenty-nine runners. People generally, however, only one candidate is not saddled in the birdcage. What would they say if, as for the race under notice, the favorite and twenty-one of the remainder were saddled at the Ditch stables? Yet so it was, only seven horses, inclusive of Rosebery, were sent to the post, and the visitors to which this had the winner before them.

Early in the race there was a long fall, and when a mile had still to be covered there were only four or five in it. Broadside leading from Woodlands, Rosebery and Billy Duchess. Another quarter of a mile and Broadside was down, and Billy Duchess Duchess in front, but before reaching the bushes Harry Rosebery passed her and, easily holding Woodlands at bay, the son of Speculum and Ladylike strode home easiest of winners. For his services Fred Archer received the liberal gift of 1,000 guineas, and visitors having thrown in for a good stake, and Harry Constable, who rode the colt when he brought off the second half of the double, under his fourteen pound penalty, in the Cambridgehire, was rewarded with a similar gift.

Originally handicapped at 103 pounds, Rosebery's penalty brought his Cambridgehire impost to 117 pounds, and at that time no horse had succeeded in carrying off both events in the same season, although a number had attempted the feat. In the early days of the twices, the Messrs. Smith, who were then and Corran, both winners of the long race, could only finish third in the Cambridgehire, while Evenus stood in the way of Faugh a Ballagh when the latter essayed to accomplish the "double," carrying, however, only 102 pounds in the Cesarewitch, the same weight as that under which he had galloped to victory in the Second October week. Then in 1856 Vengeance (who was originally called The Chicken, when the property of the Rugeley poisoner, Pamper, the Faugh a Ballagh, won the long race, and was second in the other. Again, horses that won the Cambridgehire but could only gain a place in the earlier race, were Dacia, Raby, Landgrave and Knight of the Shire, so it is not surprising that many people should have considered Rosebery's task well-nigh impossible, in spite of his brilliant Cesarewitch victory. The market, however, eventually convinced all but the most skeptical that the record might be broken, for from 100 to 6 on the Monday following the Second October week, he rapidly came down to 12 to 1, and on Wednesday the following Wednesday headed the quotations at "sixes."

The day before the Cambridgehire he stood at about 4 to 1 and this was his price at the start, when he and Catseye, a lightly-burdened four-year-old gelding by Derby, were the only two horses in the race. Rosebery was asked to concede no less than thirty-one pounds, were joint favorites. Another well-backed one was H. Bird's The Ghost, which in the race swerved on to Rosebery and knocked him to the knees, thus giving a practical illustration of the saying that "a horse that falls down is a winner." Rosebery's nose was all muddy when he returned to the paddock and Clement wiped the dirt off. That Rosebery, in the circumstances, won at all was really marvellous, especially as he had thirty-one of the best handlers of horses for race and for show, and the mishap undoubtedly lost him several lengths.
Constable, however, handled him in masterly style, and fortunately there was still a quarter of a mile in which to make up the lost ground. This he did of characteristic fashion, passing his opponents one by one, and finally had only Sir John Astley's Hop-bloom—one of his Cesarewitch antagonists—to beat.
From the distance to the winning post Rosebery was always in front in a close finish, and, although he was never mentioned as the fourteen pounds extra for winning the Cesarewitch, he was not a penny prior to 1875, only a minor penalty of seven pounds, and Rosebery's feat, therefore, made a tremendous impression on the sporting public, he being the first horse to carry the extra fourteen pounds, for Duke of Parma, the first of the Cesarewitch winner, did not run in the Cambridgehire.

After his Cambridgehire success Rosebery, with Estelle and other horses, was bought by Mr. Masque, who was also a patron of Clement's stable. For some time Rosebery was only a second string horse, season—second to Lord Falmouth's Skylark in the Gold Vase at Ascot and then for the Cambridgehire, for which he ran unplaced under the top weight of 126 pounds to Prince D'Arenberg's Jongleur, which carried 116 pounds. In that race Rosebery strained his leg, and was put out of training, but when he stud he achieved fame as the sire of Amphion, Lady Rosebery, Crowberry, Cornbury, Primrose II, and many others.

Before entering into other matters mention must be made of what may be termed the "Post" episode in Rosebery's career. During the autumn prior to his double a prominent layer got on the scent of the horse and dispatched his brother to Lambourn to tout the doings of Clement's charge. The advent in the neighborhood of a mysterious stranger quickly became known to Clement, in order to get rid of the unwelcome visitor recourse was had to a simple but ingenious stratagem. It was the custom to send a boy on a hack to the village to take and bring back post letters and Clement—who, if he had not been a jockey and an owner, would have been a well-known fame as a writer of plays of the type of "The Prodigal Daughter" and "The Derby Winner"—conceived the brilliant notion of using Rosebery to carry the boy with the postbag. It worked like a charm, for the matter was greatly impressed by the big Bon Marche in Paris, which he had seen when on a visit to the Paris Exhibition, he invested a large part of his money in land and in the building of a colossal establishment on similar lines at Brixton. The scheme was a brilliant success, but, unfortunately, while in his hands it turned out to be the reverse of a financial success. Mention is made of this as It affords one more instance of a man gifted with great ideas, who achieved marked success in various ventures, only to meet with loss on straying into other and less accustomed paths.

The deceased retained an interest in racing to the end, but after the Rosebery epoch he owned few horses of note. Among the exceptions was Magistrate—likewise owned in partnership with Sydney Smith—which was trained by Walters, Sr., at Pimlico, and brought off a victory for a second place of seventy guineas. In the colors of the late Mr. Redfern, who secured him in a selling race at Doncaster, Magistrate won a number of races. James Smith was also responsible for the management of, and interest in, the horses which ran in the names of Mr. Leybourne and S. J. Baker, among them being such well-known performers as Goldseeker, Tyrant, Lord Esterling, Tarrare (which was afterwards named Quardel and did good service for Lord Rosebery), Gentili, and Dargle. The last named was well named for the Manchester Stakes, but he was unlucky and went wrong on the morning of the race.

ENGLISH TWO-YEAR-OLDS OF 1910.
Diversity of Opinion as to Which Is Entitled to Be Regarded as Top-Notcher.

"Nearly all of the English high-class two-year-old colts and fillies have gone into winter quarters, and the question as to which is the top-notch remains undecided, and there is as much discussion as last year, when Leaning and Nell Gwyn divided opinion. says a writer in the New York Sun. "For more than a month there has been a close run for supremacy between Seaforth, a bay colt by Symington, dam by Timothy, and owned by Dermot McAlmout, and Pietri, a bay colt by St. Frusquin out of Pie Powder, and owned by Leopold de Rothschild. Each had his admirers all along, but the turfites who are never actuated by sentiment or an animal's looks waited for the Middle Park Plate at the Second October meeting to see which was entitled to the nursery crown. In this the shrewd brigade were disappointed for the pair ran a dead heat for second place, the winner being Borrow, a gelding owned by Harry Payne Whitney. The American youngster won by a neck, but a pull of six pounds in the weights on the other two probably gave him the victory. On account of being unused, Borrow holds no classic engagements next year and is out of the reckoning, but he has good engagements in the Whitstable Plate at Hurst Park and the St. George Stakes at Liverpool.

"Prior to the Middle Park Plate Seaforth had an unbeaten record with such a high-class list of victories to his credit as the Woodcock Stakes at Epsom, the New Stakes at Ascot and the Michaelmas Plate at Manchester. In the first of these three occasions he had Borrow among his opponents, and the American gelding finished in a neck many lengths in the rear of the winner. Seaforth, the Princess of Wales's Guineas and St. Leger, but not in the Derby.
Pietri began his turf career a couple of weeks later than Seaforth, missed the rich Imperial Produce Stakes and, after running green in the Coventry Stakes, captured the Princess of Wales's Plate at the Richmond Stakes at Goodwood, the envied trophy, the "Gimcrack Stakes" at York, and the time-honored Champagne Stakes at Doncaster. He is in all the big classics of next year, but this son of St.
Frusquin has a slight mark against him, for already he has shown an inclination to exhibit some tantrums before the barrier.

"In the Gimcrack Stakes Danny Maher had the leg up on Pietri and the colt gave a lot of trouble at the gate and when the horses broke away he was not very much inclined to start straight, but he but Maher finally got hold of him and made him travel in rare style. Pietri was still more unmanageable in the Middle Park Plate and he was backing and twisting, but singularly Maher got him away in front. The scene before the barrier had the effect of altering the prices for the Middle Park Plate favorite over Seaforth, but when the backers saw his capers on the starting line they switched and Seaforth was the final choice at 5 to 4, while the price against Pietri was 11 to 8.

"After the five runners returned to the paddock the animal to attract the attention of the critics and those keen on form was King William, the colt that came in a close fourth and only about three-quarters of a length behind the dead heaters. What was particularly noticed more than anything else was that King William was going the fastest and the best sensus was that had the winning post been a hundred yards farther away he would have finished in front and had the distance been a mile it was thought he would have lost the other three completely. There was still another point to be noted, for he was the part of the journey he was pocketed behind the three leaders, which were running almost abreast, and in the last furlong Wootton, who rode him, had to whip him around on the outside, a move which lost some ground.

"When King William struck a straight line for the wire he gained on the others at every stride, and for an animal without any serious training heretofore his display means that he is an out and out stayer. He was shouldering 122 pounds, a pound less than Borrow, while Seaforth and Pietri carried 129. King William is by William III., which ran second for the Derby in 1901, and out of a mare named Glasalt, so that he is highly bred and is a powerful chestnut with a fine shoulder and of the grand upstanding sort. It is said that he has the eye as the finished build of a colt for the Epsom course, and after George Lambton has put in a few months on him in the way of development he is sure, bar accident, to show some class next season.
The colt holds a long string of engagements along with the Two Thousand Guineas, Derby and St.
Leger.

"He is owned by Lord Derby and no more fitting episode would be than if he carried the black jacket and white cap of his owner to victory in the race instituted by the Derby Club to bring to the fore the two-year-old race, but it is said that he has been 1780 and the foremost turf event of the whole world.
It is singular that in the long stretch of years from the first contest to the present day the race has only been won once by the horse of Derby, and that was by Sir Peter Teazle for Lord Derby in 1787.
The Oaks was also inaugurated by the family of Derby in 1789.

"The National Breeders' Produce Stakes at Sandaway Park is the richest two-year-old event of the season and it was run on July 1, rather early for the two-year-old race, but it did not attract the big field of eighteen going to the post. It was worth $21,000 and was won by Cellini, a highly-bred chestnut colt by Cyllene out of the famous Sirena, the dam of Siberia, Electra and Moyglare. Cyllene is so far ahead in winning streak this year that he will surely top the others, and the blood has done great things in the last few years. Sirena was herself winner of the Duke of York Stakes in 1898 and two years later she won the Jubilee Handicap, as was a performer six races very good and it is worthy of note that she was bred by Lord Stan-Simon, Electra to Eager, Moyglare to Flying Fox and now Cellini to Cyllene. Previous to this race Cellini had been out twice, but failed to secure a bracket. In the Knaphville Plate at York he braced market Sandwich secured another bracket, the race being the First Nursery Handicap, and on that occasion she had 124 pounds in the saddle. These were her best performances.

The best of the fillies seems to be Hair Trigger II. by Fowling piece, out of Altair, and owned by Lord Derby. Her best showing was in the Boswell Stakes, where with a six-pound allowance, she came home in front of Wrinkler. Lord Falmouth has a good one in Invicta, by Lord Bobs, out of Galeta, and one of her best races was in the Sixty-third Triennial Produce Stakes, which she won with 116 pounds on her back. Major Eustace Loder has two good ones in Canvas Back, by Gallinule, out of Sibola, and Knockfeerna, by Desmond, out of Adula, an own sister to Pretty Polly. This latter filly won the great Breeders' Produce Stakes of $10,000 at Liverpool, carrying 119 pounds.

In the classics and other races the fine string of 381 two-year-olds figure on the lists. The ones that show themselves to be rated between 119 and 133 pounds are the ones calculated to have a chance on the classics, and they are twenty-two in number this time. The second class are those between 118 and 112, and there are twenty-nine, some of which may improve to have a chance in the big races. Between 100 and 111 pounds there are 129, and these are supposed to be the handicap brigade with but a slim chance in the classics. Below 100 pounds are the selling plate element, and they number 190. Following are the names and rating of the first twenty-two as given by the handicapper at Newmarket:
